

School of Museum Studies

Over the past 50 years, we have acquired a global reputation for leading-edge thinking and experimental practice in museum studies.

The School of Museum Studies has made a significant and sustained contribution to the international cultural sector and the field of museum studies by: training creative and critical professionals who have transformed organisations and professional practice throughout the world; producing original, rigorous and internationally influential research; working collaboratively on a range of pioneering initiatives.

Within our School researchers, practitioners and postgraduate students come together to think creatively and critically about museums, galleries and heritage.
